

Film-Based Argument

In a writer's shoes, their expressions through writing helps to express what is in their mind and through their published piece, can spread the knowledge of their thoughts throughout the world. This can lead to many people's minds being changed and can possibly change the world. The impact can be a mind-changing scenario. In the film, the main character, Abbott who is an agent who works for the security of the people, she makes an impact on people's safety. Terrorism is a great threat to many nations and to help prevent it is a very impactful role. A writer's role and a security agent who is in a top position both make an impact by influencing the people's state of mind.

As a security agent who works for the U.S. Embassy, partakes in the prevention in terrorism and as the main character in the film, she is a big influence on making the world a better place in terms of safety. Her job holds a high ground in the status of one of the most important roles on Earth. Preventing terrorism makes a big impact on the traverse in economical safety and individual security. Depending on the job position that is held within the embassy, employees there make anywhere between an annual of around \$30,000 to around \$160,000. As a writer, it is very important to express the inner thoughts of yourself and convey your message to the world. A powerful enough message can spread and become a huge influence on people.

One may argue that a writer's influence cannot really compete in the influence of a top security agent's position in security. It also can be argued that a high official in an Embassy can no way be compared to an author of a piece of writing and therefore is not relevant. This is true to an extent because these are two different kinds of positions career wise and can be seen as holding no ground to stand on when it comes to similarities in importance. Although, I do agree with that alternate position to an extent, this rebuttal only can hold so much water before it drowns in lack of nuance.

In the movie, Abbott's actions as a person of her position prevented a huge terrorist attack on U.S. soil and in a result saved millions of lives that could have been lost if it wasn't for her. If she was on the news as a hero, thousands if not millions of people's minds would have changed with their opinion of her role for her country. They would have appreciated the sacrifices that are made to prevent terrorism. Since there have been tens of times where terrorists almost succeeded in their plans. Writers on the other hand also change the world and have changed the world many times. For example in the mid to late nineteenth century, Charles Darwin proposed in books like "On The Origin Of Species" the theory of evolution and has changed in ways of the world's understanding of biology and other sciences that involved life studies. The theory of evolution was first proposed by Darwin and has influenced millions and helped create the understanding of life as we do today.

In conclusion, both knowledge and the physical world that we interact is interweaved in reality. Whether you are a writer or a high positioned staff member in a very important job, they are both very impactful in the sphere of influence. Both compare to being a big role in yesterday's and today's society. Because of the power that a person can have when it comes to writing and being in a high position, it is important to be careful when it comes to actions that are taken because the world is dependent on people like them. So both a writer's role and a security agent who is in a top position both make an impact by influencing the people's state of mind.